Danger Along the Equator

It was kwiet in the jungle. Tomas huddled like a scared animle in the brush. He had come to this rejun to give a lechure about using diferent rainforest plants in medicine. But now he was stranded on a deserted, unpaved road somewhere near the equater. A tire on his vehicle was puntured, and the vehicle was stalled on the side of the road. Tomas had a broken leg, and it was almost dark.

What would hapen next? Only a few travelers had passed him allong the road as he had driyen toward the field hospital where he was to have spoken. Now, if he ever made it to his destination, instead of speaking, he would be a patient. As the secunds dragged by, Tomas peered down the road agin and then slipped into unconsciousness.
